Then the dragon carried Sparrowhawk away to his home, for his power was gone, he was not a mage. So presently the Masters of Roke met to choose a new Archmage, here, in the Grove, as always. But not as always.."Anyone can make a fist and show a palm," said the tall woman, pleasantly. She felt herself blush, her face and throat burning, dizzy, her ears ringing. She sought words, anything to say, to turn his attention away from her, and could find nothing at all. He sat down near her. She looked down, as if studying the skeleton of a last-year's leaf by her hand..He groaned and scoured his scalp with his knuckles. He was sitting on the dirt in their old play-place, a kind of bower deep in the willows, where they could hear the stream running over the stones nearby and the clang-clang of the smithy further off. He drank, and tried to crawl away from the wet rocks afterward, because he was very cold. She was stroking down the mare's right foreleg. Her hands came away covered with blood-streaked horse sweat. "There, there," she said. The brave girl, the brave heart." The mare put her head down and shivered all over with relief. "What did you keep her standing there in the middle of the dogs for?" the woman demanded furiously. Power like that shouldn't go wandering about unchannelled and unsignalled..She pondered - conversation with her was often a slow business - and said, "Rose always said I had power, but she didn't know what kind. And I ... I know I do, but I don't know what it is." The first time I had seen an infor was on Luna, and I had taken it to be an artificial flower.. "Free!" said the tall woman, and her voice cracked like a whip. Then she looked at her companions, under them, and he would know that under the roots of the grass a stream crept through dark earth, "Well, he can't lift the murrain all at once.
